Edine The Washington Hamid:
I read with considerable interest your mild protest of the discontinuance of public free drinking fountains at the Union Station in this morning's issue of The Herath, and it seems almost beyond belief that the management of the Union Station should be so mercensive and careless of the traveling public, as pecially of the poor, as to deprive them of a piece to get a drink of water without paying for M. June 21, 1811.

An original poem dedicated to Mr. Stuart was read and a copy presented to him. The lines follow:
We would speak to joe now, out of depths in our leasts.
Greater for the many days.

Greates for then you ever could dream.
We would tell of the work you have done in you life.
By that work you, have won our exteem.

And we also would speak, with tears in our eyes.

And a light on our bross from above.

Of the life you here led in the midst of our lives

By that life you have wen our great loss.

A beautifully bound book also was pre-sented to the retiring superintendent con-taining quotations from Van Dyks and expressions from Western school-teachers and others.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY By A. W. MACY. JOHN ADAMS A POOR LOSER.

John Adams, second President of the United States, was not a good loser. He wanted another term, and he worked hard for it. None of the candidates received a majority of the electoral votes, and the election was thrown into the House of Representatives. But Adams had no chance there for he was third in the race. and only the two having the highest number of electoral votes could be voted for. choice lay between Jofferson and Burr, and Jefferson won. Adams was very much diagruntled, and make things unpleasant for his successor. He filled every vacant office he could lay his hands ou, so as to leave as little parconage an possible for Jefferson. No only so, but in the closing bour of his administration he and his party associates created twenty three new judgeships, for which there was no necessity, and worked till the stroke of mid-night on March 3, filling out and signing commissions for these "midnight judges," as they were
